Honda-Waymo talks said to have faltered on tech access

BLOOMBERG
Southfield, October 5

HONDA MOTOR AND Waymo, the self-driving car unit of Alphabet, were nearing a deal to jointly develop autonomous vehicles earlier this year when the Japanese company walked away, according to people familiar with the matter.

Just a few months later, Honda bought into General Motors' GM Cruise unit instead, choosing a familiar partner over a tech heavyweight. There are any number of reasons to explain why the Waymo deal failed, but the most pressing issues underscore the complexities that technology companies and automakers face as they both team up and also compete for a piece of the future of transportation.

For one, Waymo wasn't willing to share the substantial technology it had already developed to run autonomous vehicles, and was seeking to cut a deal that would focus on Honda providing the cars, according to two people with knowledge of the matter, who asked not to be named because the talks were private. Essentially, Waymo wanted to be the brains and have Honda be the brawn in the relationship.

"It's about control of technology and user experience," said Grayson Brulte, co-founder of autonomy consulting firm Brulte & Co. "You have to assume that Honda wants to maintain a degree of control."

One person familiar with the talks said that Waymo wanted Honda to supply electric vehicles — an area where the automaker is just beginning to establish itself. All of Waymo's existing partnerships supply EVs or plug-in hybrids because its autonomous driving system needs more power than the puny 12-volt batteries in conventional cars.

There are any number of reasons to explain why the Waymo deal failed, but the most pressing issues underscore the complexities that technology companies and automakers face as they both team up and also compete for a piece of the future of transportation

After starting talks with Honda in late 2016, Honda told Waymo it was working on an EV for the partnership that would compete with Tesla Inc.'s Model 3. But by December of last year, Waymo was concerned about progress toward that goal and Honda went shopping for battery packs to power the vehicle, the person said.

Meanwhile, Honda had an existing partnership with GM to develop fuel cells. The Detroit automaker has its Chevrolet Bolt EV in showrooms and has developed a battery pack that will be used in 20 new EVs globally by 2023. In June, the companies announced a deal that would have Honda using GM's cells and battery pack. GM's battery not only had good range, but by working together the two automakers figured they could lower costs.

Nafta's China clause is latest blow to Trudeau's Asia ambitions

BLOOMBERG
Ottawa, October 5

JUSTIN TRUDEAU DREAMS of closer Canadian ties with China. The deal he just made with Donald Trump makes it harder for that to happen.

The new trade agreement between the US, Canada and Mexico includes a provision that requires one member to notify the others if it launches trade talks with a non-market economy. If those talks lead to a deal, the signatory could potentially be frozen out of the North American pact.

It's essentially a China clause, with the Trump administration gearing up for trade war with Beijing. It's also partially symbolic. But for Trudeau, it's either a concession or an admission that his aspirations for a free-trade deal China have fallen flat.

The Canadian prime minister's visit to China fizzled last year, and he rejected a major takeover this spring. But in a cabinet shuffle this summer — when the fate of the North American Free Trade Agreement was still unclear — he added "diversification" to his new trade minister's title. And now he's effectively siding with the US against the Asian powerhouse.

"The US is going to get all its partners to gang up on China, but it's clear that Canada did this because there was a gun to its head," said Mary Lovely, an economics professor at Syracuse University who studies trade issues.

"Now Canada has its hands tied."

The US and Canada reached their deal late Sunday, shortly before a deadline, and published the legal text that would allow it to be signed by the end of November. The US-Mexico-Canada Agreement, as the new Nafta is known, still needs to be ratified by the US Congress and other legislatures before coming into force.

Article 32.10 requires any USMCA nation to notify the other two members three months before launching free trade talks with a non-market economy. The other countries can review any deal before it's signed and, once a new pact between a USMCA member and a non-market economy takes effect, the other two members can terminate the trilateral North American agreement and strike a bilateral one.

"They can basically pull the chute and kick you out over virtue of what they feel violates that clause," said Peter MacKay, who served as foreign minister under Trudeau's predecessor and is now a partner at law firm Baker & McKenzie. "The government doesn't seem to be very forthcoming as to why they would want to become supplicant to the United States in a trade war with China."

Others argue the change is more symbolic. "While I understand why people see this provision as a bit of an infringement on Canadian sovereignty, that's not typical of an FTA," said Matthew Kronby, a

Pakistan opposition leader Shehbaz Sharif arrested ahead of polls

REUTERS
Islamabad, October 5

PAKISTANI OPPOSITION LEADER Shehbaz Sharif was arrested on Friday in a longstanding corruption case, the country's anti-graft agency said, nine days before crucial by-elections are due to be held.

His brother, ousted Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, was sentenced earlier this year to 10 years in prison by the same agency after the Supreme Court removed him from power.

Friday's arrest, by agents of the National Accountability Bureau (NAB) in Lahore, involved a case of alleged corruption in a low-cost housing scheme, called Aashyana (Shelter), when Shehbaz Sharif was chief minister of Punjab province.

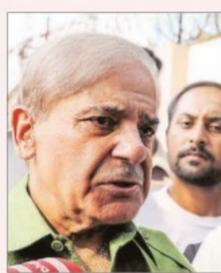

"NAB Lahore has arrested former chief minister of Punjab Shehbaz Sharif in Aashyana company case. NAB will produce the former chief minister of Punjab in the honourable accountability court tomorrow," a statement from the agency said.

Information Minister Fawad Chaudhry welcomed the arrest and offered the agency any help it needed.

"This step today is a big step," he told reporters. New Prime Minister Imran Khan's party campaigned on an anti-corruption platform.

Nawaz Sharif has denounced corruption cases against him and his party's leaders as politically motivated, and both brothers deny any wrongdoing. Nawaz Sharif was released from prison last month pending an appeal against his conviction.

The former prime minister was arrested 10 days before the July 25 general election, which was won by cricket star turned politician Imran Khan, who now leads the new government.

The Sharifs' Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz came in second place in the election. Their party, along with all other major opposition parties, denounced the polls as rigged, alleging the military and courts of tipping the scale in favour of Khan's party.

The Sharifs' party accused the new government of using the anti-corruption agency for political victimisation. "The government is afraid that the PML-N isn't broken despite all the cheap tactics," party spokeswoman Maryam Aurangzeb said, adding: "It is an attempt to influence the by-election."

By-elections to fill 11 parliamentary seats and 19 provincial assembly seats are scheduled for October 14. Those seats remain empty because of court-ordered delays and the ability of leading candidates to run in several constituencies at once, but only represent one.

The by-elections could affect the slim majority Khan's coalition government holds in parliament, though many of the constituencies are considered strongholds of his Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) party.

The contests are considered to be closer in the provincial assemblies and could result in the PML-N winning back control of Punjab.

Asian cities challenge US dominance in venture capital

BLOOMBERG
San Francisco, October 5

THE US IS losing its edge as the world's foremost destination for venture capital investment, a new study shows, with US startups capturing a rapidly declining share of global dollars invested, and Chinese companies grabbing more of the total. Because startups play a critical role in economic dynamism, the study bodes well for the global economy as a whole, its authors say, even as it points to an erosion of US dominance.

Over the past three years through 2017, San Francisco startups won the most investment dollars, $81.8 billion. But Beijing area startups came close behind at $72.8 billion. New York ranked a distant third with $33.8 billion, followed by San Jose, California; Boston; and Shanghai, all of which attracted close to $25 billion.

"The rest of the world, they're playing a bigger role," said economist Ian Hathaway, who co-authored the study with urban tech-

Over the past three years through 2017, San Francisco startups won the most investment dollars, $81.8 billion. But Beijing area startups came close behind at $72.8 billion

Francisco accounted for 16% of the growth, and New York 7%.

"The notion that successful startups must launch and scale in Silicon Valley or another leading American city no longer holds true," Hathaway and Florida wrote in their study, compiled for the Center for American Entrepreneurship, a Washington-based research group. "Increasingly, the world's high-tech entrepreneurs are able to stay in their home city or nation and raise venture capital."

But there are limits to how much the landscape is shifting. Companies based in smaller US cities often raise considerably smaller rounds and generally do not grow as big compared to startups in bigger US cities, making it hard to create startup centers outside major metropolises. The report indicated that pattern repeats globally. Just 24 cities account for three-quarters of venture capital investment, the report found, with the top six bringing in more than half.
